Generations of good food and good times run through our family, with a history of welcoming and hosting people that goes back to 1939.

One side of the family ran quintessential Kiwi hotels for many a year; the other made their name serving good eats from a milk bar in Christchurch city. And in the 1970s, the two sides combined that experience and built the Commodore Hotel.

At the heart of our family tradition is a warm and welcoming experience. It's how we were raised and how we've lived our entire lives. And now it's in the hands of us three Patterson brothers to continue that custom of showing our guests what genuine hospitality is. So please, relax and let yourself feel at home as you enjoy the kind of good food and good times that generations of hosting provide.

Michael, Ken and Thomas Patterson
